Mary Jo Leddy, is a senior fellow at Massey College at the University of Toronto. She has had a varied career as a theologian, academic, journalist, social activist, and author of several articles and books, most recently Why Are We Here? A Meditation on Canada. She is best known for her work at Romero House, a community and charitable organization that welcomes and supports refugee claimants. She speaks to the lessons in trust, faith, and gratitude that she has learned from asylum seekers who find sanctuary and safe haven in this diverse community which provides settlement and support for the stranger who seeks their help.
